Max Pro Markets, hereinafter referred to as "the Company," provides this Risk Disclosure Statement to ensure that users understand the risks associated with trading and investing in financial markets. By accessing or using the Company's website, services, or products, users acknowledge that they have read, understood, and agreed to be bound by this Risk Disclosure Statement. It is imperative that users carefully consider the risks involved before engaging in any trading or investment activities.

- Market Risks: Trading and investing in financial markets, including but not limited to stocks, bonds, commodities, currencies, and derivatives, involve inherent risks. Market conditions can be volatile and unpredictable, leading to significant fluctuations in asset prices. Users may experience substantial losses, and there is no guarantee of profit.
- Leverage Risks: The use of leverage or margin can amplify both profits and losses. While leverage can increase potential returns, it also increases the level of risk. Users should be aware that trading on margin involves borrowing funds from the broker, and they may be required to deposit additional funds to maintain their positions in volatile markets.
- Liquidity Risks: Some financial markets or instruments may lack sufficient liquidity, which can result in difficulty in executing trades at desired prices. Illiquid markets may also lead to wider bid-ask spreads, making it more costly to enter or exit positions.
- Country and Political Risks: Political instability, changes in government policies, economic sanctions, or geopolitical tensions can impact financial markets and investment returns. Users should consider the potential impact of such factors on their investment portfolios, especially when investing in foreign markets.
- Credit Risks: Users should assess the creditworthiness of counterparties when engaging in transactions involving credit instruments such as bonds or derivatives. Default or credit rating downgrades of issuers can lead to losses for investors holding such instruments.
- Regulatory Risks: Changes in regulatory requirements, laws, or regulations governing financial markets can affect trading activities and investment strategies. Users should stay informed about regulatory developments and comply with all applicable laws and regulations.
- Counterparty Risks: Transactions executed through brokers, exchanges, or other financial intermediaries expose users to counterparty risks. Users should consider the financial stability and reputation of counterparties before entering into transactions with them.
- System Risks: The Company's website, services, or products may be subject to technical failures, interruptions, or cyber-attacks, which could disrupt trading activities or result in the loss of user data. Users should take appropriate measures to safeguard their accounts and information.
- Past Performance is Not Indicative of Future Results: Historical performance data provided by the Company is for informational purposes only and should not be relied upon as a guarantee of future performance. Market conditions may change, and past performance does not guarantee similar results in the future.
